NON-RESIDENT PARTNERS.

Interesting Questions Passed Upon by Judge Laughlin in Kendall vs. Curran.

In the matter of the attachment proceedings of the Kendall Boot & Shoe company against Ulysses T. Curran, non-resident partner in the firm of Otto Johnson & Co., Judge Laughlin sustained the demurrer of the plaintiffs to the plea in abatement and ordered a nunc pro tunc judgment and also sustained the demurrer of the plaintiffs to the attachment affidavit. Mr. E. A. Fiske represented the plaintiffs and Messrs. Bartlett, Knebel and Frost were attorneys for the defendant.

The case is particularly interesting to those living non-resident partners. The plaintiffs contended that they had the right under the statute to sue a non-resident partner for a partnership debt, though other members of the firm were residents of Santa Fe; that such non-resident partner might be sued in attachment on the ground of his non-residence under a statute of this territory making the partnership contract several as well as joint.

The defendant filed a plea in abatement, alleging that there were two partners, one of whom was a resident of Santa Fe, and that the plaintiffs had only sued the one who was a non-resident. That plea the plaintiff demurred, relying upon the statute above mentioned, admitting for the purposes of the proceeding the claim of the defendants that Otto Johnson was a partner in the concern, although as a matter of fact insisting that Curran was the firm. After being fully advised in the premises, the court sustained the demurrer.

The defendant then pleaded in bar and filed an answer to the attachment affidavit. The plaintiffs demurred to this answer and in the argument had on that demurrer the points considered were: That the only issue to be tried under such an answer was the truth of the ground of the attachment affidavit, alleging non-residence, and that all matters pleaded in that answer other than a denial of such ground of attachment, such as questions relating to the indebtedness, name of partnership, on what account indebtedness accrued and right of plaintiffs to attach one of several partners, who was a non-resident, on the ground of such non-residence, were immaterial in such an answer.

The original claim of the plaintiffs was $700 and the costs will increase the amount of the judgment sought to a little over $800. As Receiver Haspelmath has closed out the stock of Johnson & Co. for over $2,000 in cash, being a larger amount than the appraised value thereof, there will be about $1,200 to distribute among the other creditors after the Kendall attachment has been satisfied. Mr. Haspelmath has proved his superior business qualifications by the manner in which he has handled this stock of goods.

DAVID FOOTE SELLERS.

New Mexico's First Graduate from Annapolis is a Full Ensign in the Navy—His Appointment—A "Star Cadet."

The New Mexican is pleased to be able to announce that David Foote Sellers, the first person to graduate at the United States naval academy from New Mexico, has been appointed an ensign in the United States navy.

After obtaining first rank in a competitive examination, in which all the young men of New Mexico had an equal show, Mr. Sellers, then residing at Santa Fe, was appointed as a cadet to Annapolis by Delegate Joseph in 1890.

His career at the naval academy did credit to the territory, as he graduated in 1894 standing fifth in a class of forty-seven, and was a "star cadet" (one having an average of 85 per cent or over) during his entire course. He was also a cadet officer during his first class year.

After graduation, Cadet Sellers served his two years' cruise necessary to complete the six-year course on the United States steamship New York, part of the time in charge of the gun deck and part of the time as assistant navigator. At the expiration of his cruise, he with the rest of his class (except four who had joined the construction corps) took his final examinations at the naval academy, passing with honors, his final class standing being number two. Ensign Sellers will spend his two months' leave at the home of his parents at Fort Hill, Okla.
